AFTER THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

Blue and Gray Meet Again on the Battlefield of Chickamauga.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 19.—After an interval of thirty-two years, the Blue and the Gray today again met around the crescent of Snodgrass hill, on the battlefield of Chickamauga, but not, as then, amid the mist and leaden hail which marked those dreadful days of 1863, making the conflict the most disastrous in its casualties to those concerned which history knows. Under one flag, a re-united host devoted to the advancement and prosperity of one common country, the veteran foemen of a third of a century ago met today to dedicate as a national park the ground made sacred by the blood of heroes who fought at their side.

This park is one of the most noticeable in existence, and unique in many respects. It extends from Sherman heights in Tennessee to Glass Mills, Georgia, a distance of twenty-two miles, over all of which, together with necessary approaches, the government of these states have ceded jurisdiction to the United States. At present the government owns between ten and eleven square miles—6,500 acres—of which 3,500 are cleared of underbrush. Congress has authorized the purchase of a total area of about sixteen square miles. It has already expended for the purposes of the park $750,000, including the appropriation for the current year, besides $20,000 for the expenses of the dedication. Seventy-two miles of roadway, more or less improved, have been laid, and five observation towers erected within the park limits, within view from which are scenes of the battles of Chickamauga, Orchard Knob, Lookout Mountain, Wauhatchie, Missionary Ridge and Brown's Ferry. A broad boulevard will connect the extreme points of the park, much of it being already constructed along the crest of Missionary Ridge, Bragg's line of battle. From almost any point along its length a most magnificent view of the valley and far-off heights is obtained.

In its work of marking the line of battle and the positions of the troops engaged, the national commission has been assisted by the commissioners of twenty-five states, including all the Southern states. About three hundred large historical tablets are already in place, and other tablets giving locality and distance number three hundred. Each battery engaged is being marked by at least two guns. One hundred and fifty guns are mounted in fighting positions of batteries, and four hundred guns are on the ground ready for mounting. Ohio has fifty-four monuments; Illinois, thirty-three, Minnesota, five; Indiana, thirty-seven; Michigan, eleven; Massachusetts, one; Kansas, three; Missouri, five; Wisconsin, nine; the United States regulars, nine. Commissions are preparing to erect monuments as follows: New York, twenty; Pennsylvania, eighteen; Connecticut, two; Tennessee, four.

Chattanooga was early astir, and all the morning the various roads to the Chickamauga field were filled with vehicles, carrying would-be spectators of the dedication ceremonies. A belt line of railroads was organized for the occasion, and by that agency it was made possible for the great crowd of visitors to reach the grounds. The exercises were held in an immense stand built near the observation tower on Snodgrass hill, the centre of the deadly opening day conflict. Besides the federal officials in attendance, Secretaries Herbert and Smith and Postmaster General Wilson and several Congressmen were present. There were also present governors of the following states, some of whom were accompanied by their staffs, and members of the commissions from the several states appointed to act with the national commission in locating monuments and markers: Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Tennessee, Vermont and Wisconsin, Missouri, Florida and North Carolina were represented by delegations of distinguished citizens, and to crown all was the almost innumerable host of survivors of the battle, who had come to fight it all over again and to rejoice in its final issue, and who represented nearly every state in the country.

Promptly at noon a salute of forty-four guns announced the beginning of the execution of the program so long arranged and looked forward to. The addresses of Senator and General John M. Palmer of Illinois and of Senator and General John B. Gordon of Georgia were preceded by the singing of "America" by the audience, and followed by "Auld Lang Syne." General J. S. Fullerton, chairman of the national park commission, and as such Secretary Lamont's representative, charged with the duty of directing the dedicatory exercises, introduced Vice President Stevenson, who presided in the absence of the Secretary of War. He said:

"I am honored by being called to preside over the ceremonies of this day. By solemn decree of the representatives of this American people, this magnificent park, with its wonderous associations and memories, is now to be dedicated for all time to national and patriotic purposes. This is the fitting hour for the august ceremonies we now inaugurate. Today, by act of the Congress of the United States, the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park is forever set apart from all common uses, solemnly dedicated for all the ages to all the American people. The day is auspicious. It notes the anniversary of one of the greatest battles known to history. Here, in the dread tribunal of the last resort, valor contended against valor. Here brave men struggled and died for the right—as God gave them to see the right. Thirty-two years have passed, and the survivors of that masterful day—victors and vanquished alike—again meet upon this memorable field. Alas, the splendid armies which rendezvoused here are now little more than a procession of shadows.

"'On fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread;
While glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead.'

"Our eyes now behold the sublime spectacle of the honored survivors of the great battle coming together on these heights once more. They meet, not in deadly conflict, but as brothers, under one flag—fellow-citizens of a common country, all grateful to God that in the supreme struggle the government of our fathers—our common heritage—was triumphant, and that to all of the coming generations of our countrymen it will remain 'an indivisible union of indestructible states.' 'In a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living or dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or to detract.' I will detain you no longer from listening to the eloquent words of those who were participants in the bloody struggle, the sharers alike in its danger and its glory."

Prayer was offered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Gailor of Tennessee. The first address was that of General Palmer who was followed by General Gordon, who spoke as follows:

"The illustrious Charles Sumner of Massachusetts," said he, among other things, "proposed in the federal Senate to do away with all mementoes of our civil war. It is due to his memory, however, as well as to the truth, to say that in making it his spirit was catholic and his patriotism broad, for his purpose was to lessen passion, restore harmony to the embittered sections and unity to his divided country. His inspirations were worthy of all praise, but his apprehensions that harm would come to the republic from preserving mementoes of the great struggle were misapprehensive. Few if any, there were who then saw, as we now see, that the American civil war, which fully and rightfully understood, was to become the most unique chapter in the world's history; that it was inevitable; that it came as the inevitable always comes, with no human agency to avert it; that it was inevitable because it was an irrepressible conflict between irreconcilable constitutional constructions, maintained on both sides with American tenacity, by brave and truth-loving people, involving momentous interests and rights, whose claims could neither be settled nor silenced except by the shedding of blood. Our American civil war was an advance in the cause of liberty, because among the whole American people it augmented and ennobled the manhood and womanhood essential to the future life of the republic. It was a forward movement, because it developed the spirit of self-sacrifice and of consecration as these virtues had never before been developed since the days of Washington. It was an onward march, because while in no sense lessening the respect of each for the opposite section, it taught the world that liberty and law can live in this country even through internecine war, and that this republic, though rent in twain today, is reunited tomorrow in stronger and more enduring bonds."

To the strains of the band the gathering then dispersed, most of them returning to the city to attend the reunion of the Federal and Confederate survivors of the Army of the Tennessee, to be held tonight. Many ring-ed to revive by a sight of the old places memories of the bitter-sweet long ago.

STEAMER EDAM SUNK.

Foundered at Sea After a Collision in a Thick Fog.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Steamer Edam, from New York September 5 for Amsterdam, foundered off Start point, on the southern coast of England, this morning, after a collision. Her passengers and crew were saved. The Lloyds agent at Prawle's point wired this morning that he observed a steam trawler head for Start bay, having three large ship's boats in tow, and that steamer Beresford of West Hartlepool took the trawler in tow and headed for Plymouth. A large number of people were seen in the boats and on the deck of the trawler. The weather was foggy.

The Edam carried seventy-five in her crew, all told. She was fitted solely for steerage passengers and freight. She had capacity for 1,600 steerage passengers. The company values her at £50,000. Her cargo is valued approximately at £25,000.

Start point, off which the Edam sank, is a headland in the county of Devon, about nine miles southwest of Dartmouth. Prawle's point is a few miles westward of Start point, in the same county.

CARDIFF, Sept. 19.—Steamer Turkestan, which came into collision with the Edam, has arrived here with some of the Edam's passengers and crew on board.

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 19.—Steamer Beresford arrived here, towing trawler Vulture and three boats, containing the captain, crew and passengers of steamship Edam, which came into collision at 1 o'clock this morning, fifty miles southeast of Start point, with steamer Turkestan, during a thick fog. The Edam foundered. The Turkestan was lost in the fog and was not seen afterwards. Every one on board the Edam took to the boats, and all were picked up by trawler Vulture. The Edam was a bark-rigged, screw steamer of 3,030 tons, 311 feet long, 39 feet 4 inches beam, and 30 feet 3 inches depth of hold, and was supplied with two compound engines of 1,800 horse power. She was built in 1883, and was owned by the Netherlands-American Steam Navigation Company of Rotterdam.

The following details of the collision were obtained from the passengers of the Edam, who were brought here in tow of steamer Beresford: It was pitch dark at the time of the collision, and at first great alarm was manifested by those on the steamer. As soon, however, as it was seen that the Turkestan was standing by to assist, and that trawler Vulture was near at hand, the anxiety became less intense. The Edam's boats were rapidly lowered, and it was found that there was ample room in them for all on board the steamer. There was hardly time, however, for the passengers to clothe themselves fully, and the women threw on the clothing nearest at hand, and made their way to the deck, whence they were lowered to the boats, being the first to go over the vessel's side. Fortunately the sea was smooth, and the transfer was carried out without difficulty, perfect order being maintained. The Turkestan stood by until all were clear of the sinking steamer, which went down at 3 o'clock. The Turkestan's stern was badly damaged.

ACCOUNT DISALLOWED.

Government Will Not Pay Additional Insurance on Vessels During Trials.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Acting Comptroller Bowers has disallowed the accounts for additional insurance on gunboats Machias and Castine while on their trial trips on Long Island sound. The item was submitted by Pay Director May in his expense account for the trials. Mr. Bowers holds that where the contractor (in this case the Bath Iron Works of Bath, Me.) is bound to keep a vessel insured for the benefit of the United States until it is accepted, the government is not, in the absence of agreement, liable for additional insurance, procured by the contractor to cover a trial trip held elsewhere than in waters adjacent to the contractor's works.

Spain Obtaining Funds in Paris, for Use in Cuba.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Standard publishes a despatch from Cuba, saying that the funds used in the efforts to suppress the insurrection in Cuba have hitherto been drawn from the Bank of Spain, but that the government has now made arrangements with Parisian bankers to open a credit of four million sterling for six months, renewable for another six months, at five per cent. Interest. In return for this credit the bankers are to get a prominent part in a Spanish-Cuban loan when the island shall have been pacified.

Sight Endangered by a Premature Blast.

QUINCY, Mass., Sept. 19.—John Doyle was blown up at his quarry this forenoon by the premature discharge of a blast. He was burned about the face and eyes, and it is feared that he will lose his sight. He was removed to the city hospital.

VICTORIES OF PEACE.

Reunion of the Army of the Cumberland.

Dedications of Battle Monuments at Chickamauga.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 19.—The quarter centennial reunion of the Army of the Cumberland meeting in conjunction with the dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National park was held last night in the monster tent erected to accommodate the several gatherings of the week.

When the meeting had been called to order, General Morgan introduced Mayor Oehs, who made the address of welcome. Response was made by General H. V. Boynton, secretary of the association.

Lieutenant General John M. Schofield said: "Comrades—Every year the services you rendered to our common country in the time of her sorest need appear greater and greater, and your heroic deeds shine with increasing lustre. But since that period you have won a greater victory than that which crowned your arms upon the field of battle.

"You, my comrades, are now able to rejoice in the full fruits of your heroic sacrifice and of the blood of your comrades which watered the fields of the south, but was not shed in vain."

General James D. Morgan welcomed the Confederates present, saying, in part: "If in the future this good government again requires the services of her sons, the blue and the gray will be found standing shoulder to shoulder in protecting her rights."

The annual address was then delivered by ex-Senator General Charles F. Manderson of Nebraska. "My comrades and my countrymen have no fear for the republic.' It is based upon man's love of liberty, its structure is embedded in equal rights to all, and is cemented by the blood of our slain."

Secretary of the Navy Herbert, General Daniel Butterfield and General Horace Porter each in turn also made speeches, and the meeting then adjourned.

On Chickamauga's Battlefield.

The first event yesterday was the dedication of the Michigan state monuments at Snodgrass hill, a point at which there was more hard fighting during the battle than any part of the field.

In the northeast corner of the Kelley field the monuments of Wisconsin were turned over to the government at 11 o'clock. The exercises were presided over by Colonel W. W. Watkins.

The Ohio veterans took possession of Snodgrass hill as soon as those from Michigan had finished. General John Beatty, president of the Ohio commission, presided.

Short addresses were then made by ex-Governor Campbell, who was governor at the time the committee was created; Hon. J. S. Gill and Hon. J. S. McElroy. General Aquilla Wiley then made a short address formally turning the monuments over to Governor McKinley, who in turn transferred them to the national government.

Illinois monuments were dedicated on the site where Widow Glenn's house stood during the battle. It is a few hundred yards southeast of the famous "Bloody pond."

The exercises attendant upon the transfer of the Indiana monuments to the government took place at Lyttle hill, as the ridge south of the Dyer house is called, in memory of General Lyttle, who was killed there.

Massachusetts monuments were dedicated at Knob Hill at 3 o'clock. The ceremonies were short, simple and impressive. Governor Greenhalge called the assembly to order and made the address of the occasion. He briefly reviewed the part that Massachusetts took in the awful battle and then of the part she took in the rebellion. In conclusion, he spoke of the dedication of the field as a national park in honor of the heroes who fell there. At the conclusion of his speech, the governor and staff, together with the state commission, went to the National cemetery and decorated the graves of the Massachusetts soldiers buried there.

Altgeld Talked Politics.

Governor Altgeld of Illinois created a sensation at the monument dedication, the conclusion of his speech being as follows: "Instead of an armed foe that we can meet on the field there is today an enemy that is invisible, but everywhere at work destroying our institutions; that enemy is corruption. It seeks to control the press, it seeks to direct official action, it dictates legislation and endeavors to control the construction of laws.

It seeks to set the fashions and to shape public sentiment. It has emasculated American politics and placed it on the low plane of jugglery. The tendency now is for political parties to shirk principle and follow expediency.

"To be an eligible candidate now often means to stand for nothing in particular and to represent no definite principle, but be all things to all men, and in the end be contemptible. Never before did this republic call so loudly as it does today for a strong, sturdy manhood that will stand defiantly and dare to do right.

"The flag has been praised at champagne dinners, while the very pole from which it floated was being eaten off by corruption, and republican institutions were being stabbed to the vitals.

"The men of the past did their duty. Shall we do ours? They were asked to face death—you may face calumny. No man ever served his country without being villified, for all who make a profit out of injustice will be our enemies, but as sure as the heavens are high, and justice is eternal, will you triumph in the end."

HUNGRY ITALIANS

Making Things Decidedly Unpleasant in the Town of Darien, Conn.

NORWALK, Conn., Sept. 19.—Darien is in a state of siege because Joseph B. Ryder of Norwalk, president of the Darien waterworks, has neglected to pay Italian laborers employed by him as contractor in building the works.

Ryder has about 100 men employed, and until this month paid them off every four weeks. This time he failed to appear on pay day, but sent word that he would settle by Sept. 19, then extended the time to the 15th.

He has not appeared yet, and the Italians marched into Darien. They were hungry, they said, and if they were not fed they threatened to loot every store in the village.

Theophilo Euphrate, an ex-president of the company, who passed at the time, was assaulted by Italians, but escaped before receiving bodily injury. A score of Italians followed, and he gave them $5 with which to buy food.

Colonel Hayden, a sub-contractor, was spied on the street by about 40 Italians who had gathered, and they made a rush for his wagon, but he managed to escape the blows from their clubs. Twenty-five Italians kept guard over Mr. Ryder's residence at Norwalk all day.

The explanation of the visit of the Italians is found in the statement that he was in town Saturday afternoon. Jimmy, the padrone, got wind of this and brought a gang of men to Norwalk to demand their wages, but Ryder had quietly slipped out of town.

Seven carloads of pipe, three at Noroton and four at Stamford, are standing on the sidings waiting for the water company's men to return to work.

Ratsey's Little "Joke."

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—On the steamship Majestic, which sailed from Liverpool yesterday afternoon, was Sailmaker Thomas Ratsey. Mr. Ratsey said he had a good time; liked the people on this side very much, but that Americans had no sense of humor. "What do you think of the American cross-cut sails?" he was asked. "Not very much. I think that I could make as much money building and designing yachts as Herreshoff could making sails." As Mr. Ratsey does not build boats, and Herreshoff does not make sails, this was evidently a joke.

Plainly Spoken.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 19.—General M. C. Butler arrived in the city yesterday and gave out the following card with reference to Senator Tillman's attack upon him in a speech: "I have denounced Tillman to his face as a liar, a coward and a thief, and I cannot keep up with a constitutional liar. If I should kick him now, he would probably run off and howl and have me indicted for assault and battery. His statements concerning me in the constitutional convention on Monday were a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end."

Good For The Gazette!

LONDON, Sept. 19. — The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting upon the letters which passed between Lord Dunraven and New York yachtsmen regarding the America's cup races, says that it desires to reopen the controversy so far as to make the opportunity to pay a tribute to the sportsmanlike behavior of Mr. Iselin. It is a pity, the article says, that Mr. Iselin's handsome offer to Lord Dunraven could not have met with action. The American yachtsman, The Gazette concludes, deserves the respect of all lovers of sport.

Concerning Hawaii.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Standard says: Hawaii has treaties with England and France which give them protective powers over the island, quite as much, if not more, than the United States government, to so split up the rival factions as to prevent chronic revolution. Hawaii ought to be put under the actual protection of the powers most greatly concerned in its welfare.

No Amalgamation.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 19.—The directors of the National Line Steamship company have decided, as a result of a poll of the shareholders, to break off negotiations for an amalgamation of the National with the Leyland, Wilson and Furness Steamship companies. It is understood that the National Line Steamship company will go into liquidation.

Shea Reaches St. John's.

ST. JOHN'S N. F., Sept. 19.—Sir Ambrose Shea, recently governor of the Bahamas, arrived from England yesterday afternoon. He is likely to be the next governor, and it is understood that his mission is to study our affairs for the information of the imperial government.

Papacy's Plans.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The project for the pope's ransom is no secret in the cabinets of Europe. It embodies, it is said, in addition to the establishment of the papacy in a principality with its own seaport, certain naval privileges and the restoration of confiscated church property.

Against Prize Fighting.

AUSTIN, Sept. 19.—Governor Culberson, when seen in reference to Judge Hurst's opinion favorable to prize fighting, refused to express an opinion, but from his actions it is evident that he will use force to stop the fight, notwithstanding the decision.

King Gentry's Victory.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 19.—John R. Gentry, the fastest stallion in the world, yesterday beat Joe Patchen, his most formidable rival, in three straight heats at the fair grounds. No records were wiped out, but the exhibition was a fine one.

Yale's Oldest.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Dr. Nelson Isham, who was the oldest living graduate of Yale medical college, died here yesterday. He was born in Bolton, Conn., in 1805 and was a member of the class of 1828.

Gets a Long Rest.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, has been granted a furlough of a year, on account of his uninterrupted service of several years' duration in the German navy.

Saw Schooner Sink.

ALPENA, Mich., Sept. 19. — Schooner Kitchen reports that when crossing Saginaw bay saw a schooner capsize and sink. A gale was blowing at the time, and the Kitchen could not assist them.

Fishermen Seek Damages.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Sept. 19.—The Newfoundland fishing vessels seized on Labrador by a supposed crazy Canadian official have all filed notices against him, claiming heavy damages.

Found Dead.

SANFORD, Me., Sept. 19.—James W. Grant, for 20 years town clerk of Lebanon, was found dead on the floor of a room in his home yesterday, and the body was partially consumed by flames, which had also burned articles of furniture and draperies, and then apparently died out. It is thought that during the night Mr. Grant was stricken with heart disease while passing into the sitting room with a lantern in his hand.

Strike Ordered.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Iron Moulders' union 106 of this city last night ordered a strike in eight of the largest iron foundries in Boston and vicinity. The union recently asked the employers to grant moulders $3 a day as well as recognition of the union card and the appointment of a joint arbitration committee. The proprietors of foundries refused to do this, and the union has decided to make a fight.

"Called to Purgatory."

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 19.—Berdanotte Demoralino, the young girl who has been in a trance since Monday, recovered consciousness for an hour yesterday afternoon. She told her mother that her uncle, whose wake was the cause of her attack, was in purgatory and was calling for her. She relapsed into the cataleptic state and her body again became perfectly rigid.

BAD BEHAVIOR

At the Last Game of the Season Between Boston and Baltimore.

BOSTON, Sept. 18.—The home team shut out the Baltimores in a seven-inning contest. It was the last game of the series this season between the champions and the ex-champions, and was attended by some of the most disgraceful scenes witnessed on the home grounds this year. For the first time this year the services of Superintendent Haggerty were called into play, who acted in the capacity of an officer and ushered Brodie from the grounds.

NEWPORT CONVOCATION.

Quarterly Meeting and Missionary Service at Emmanuel Church.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Newport Convocation took place yesterday. A service, with the celebration of the Holy Communion, was held in the morning at St. John's Church, and the business session in the afternoon at Emmanuel Church, Archdeacon Tucker presiding, with Rev. G. H. Patterson, secretary, and Rev. Messrs. G. S. Magill, E. H. Porter, C. G. Gilliat, E. L. Buckey, J. H. Hedman and J. C. Johnes, and a number of lay delegates, present.

The executive committee reported as follows on summer missions: St. Ann's-by-the-Sea, Block Island, was opened on the first Sunday in July and had services for ten weeks, at which Rev. Edward Bradley and Rev. C. A. Hamilton of St. Agnes Chapel, New York, officiated for nine weeks and Rev. M. A. Johnson of the Berkeley Divinity School the last Sunday. The congregations were large, the chapel being thronged as usual during August. Captain John N. Beringer of St. Louis has placed a beautiful bronze memorial of his deceased wife in the chapel, and a number of other donations have been made. It is desired to raise $400 to purchase a lot adjoining the chapel for a site of a cottage for a permanent missionary.

The Mission of the Transfiguration, at Conanicut Park, should be placed under the care of the rector of St. Matthew's, Jamestown. On account of lack of funds, no services have been held there this summer.

The Scandinavian Mission, lately transferred from the care of the rector of Trinity Church to the convocation, has raised sufficient funds to pay the missionary until July 1. The committee recommend that the sum of $300 be raised by the committee by contributions for this mission, and it was so voted. A proposition suggested by the missionary, Rev. John Hedman, for the financial support of the mission during the coming year, was adopted, under which the convocation is to supply $300, and the mission raise the balance of the sum needed.

St. Paul's, Portsmouth, has completed and opened its new parish house, the dedication having been held July 16. The rector needs but $250 to free the building, which is worth $2,000. The committee recommended that $250 be contributed toward the support of the mission, on condition that the parish raise $650. This was adopted.

Holy Trinity Mission, Tiverton, lost Rev. J. C. Johnes, its missionary, by resignation June 1, since which time Archdeacon Tucker and visiting clergy have supplied the pulpit. It is hoped soon to secure a permanent missionary. This mission has a fine property and an excellent and enthusiastic congregation. On recommendation of the committee, $400 was voted for this mission, on condition that $350 be raised by the parish.

The committee arranged for three missionary services during the season, July 16 at St. Paul's, Portsmouth; August 20, at St. Columba's, and October 14, at St. Mary's, South Portsmouth, this being the semi-centennial of the consecration of Holy Cross Chapel. The congregation will have its own special commemoration Sunday, October 13, when an historical address will be given by Rev. Dr. C. G. Gilliat, son of the late John Henry Gilliat, who built the chapel and presented it to the church.

The report further said: "The Convocation Journal will complete its fourth year with the issue of the October number. It has been a useful paper in chronicling the progress of church and missionary work, and it has been peculiarly serviceable, like a parochial paper, in transmitting local information." The committee recommended that the subject of the continued publication of the journal be referred to the executive committee, with power to act. There was a general discussion of this subject, pledges were made in behalf of the various parishes, and the committee was given power in the matter, as recommended.

Rev. C. G. Gilliat, Rev. E. L. Buckey and Mr. Freeborne S. Waite were appointed a committee to report on the Tiverton mission.

The quarterly report of Mr. J. M. Taylor, treasurer, was read.

The resignation of Commander C. H. Stockton, U. S. N., from the executive committees and board of managers was accepted, and Lieutenant Hamilton Rowan, U. S. A., was elected in his place.

The next meeting of the convocation, on the third Wednesday in January, will, on invitation of Rev. E. L. Buckey, be held with St. John's Church.

It was voted to request that the new guild house in Portsmouth, when turned over to the parish, be deeded to the Rhode Island Episcopal Convocation.

A vote of thanks was extended to Emmanuel Church, and after a very lively session the convocation adjourned.

In the evening the regular missionary service was held in Emmanuel Church, and was conducted by Rev. C. G. Gilliat, Chaplain Sherman, U. S. N., and Rev. E. H. Porter. The benediction was by Archdeacon Tucker, and the usual missionary sermon was preached by Rev. C. D. Burrows of the Church of the Transfiguration, Edgewood, R. I. Rev. G. H. Patterson assisted the choir, and there were present, besides, Rev. G. J. Magill, Rev. G. Ernest Magill, Rev. E. L. Buckey, Rev. J. C. Johnes and Rev. J. H. Hedman.

THE JEWISH NEW YEAR AND DAY OF ATONEMENT.

The Jewish New Year, the commencement of the year 5656, according to the Hebrew calendar, began at sunset yesterday, and is being observed today by religious services in every Jewish synagogue throughout the world. The orthodox Hebrew believes that on the New Year—or "Rosh Hashonah," as it is termed in Hebrew—God sits on His throne and judges the chosen people the world over. This judgment, though, is not considered final—ten days being allowed for re-sentence. At the end of this time, which in this year falls on Saturday, September 28, comes the Day of Atonement, or "Yom Kippur." The services of the New Year are very impressive, and the Hebrews close their places of business and refrain from all secular duties. Services were held this morning in the synagogue on Touro street, beginning at 8 o'clock. During the morning the rabbi, Rev. Dr. David Baruch, gave an address on the progress of religious toleration and advancement.

The services of the Day of Atonement, or "Yom Kippur," are even more impressive than those of the New Year. From sunset on the evening of Friday, September 27, until the setting of the sun the day following, the devout Hebrew will not taste a morsel of food. It is the greatest fast day on the Jewish calendar, and the only one which is universally observed. Services on this day in the orthodox synagogues will begin early Friday evening, and continue throughout the entire night and the day following. Business, pleasure or any duty whatever, except to serve God, are beneath consideration. On this day the "frum," or devout Jew, will not carry money in his pockets, will not ride, no matter how far it may be from his home to the synagogue, nor will he take his mind for one moment from his prayer book.

"Kal Nidre" is the opening prayer which marks the services of "Yom Kippur." "Kal Nidre" is as well known to the Jewish children of the world as are the Ten Commandments. It is one of the first things taught the Jewish child regarding religion. At the age of thirteen the male members of a Hebrew family are by "Mitzfer"—that is, they are at the age required to know the "Ciphestors," or the Hebrew prayers. Then "Kal Nidre" is plain to them. Translated, "Kal Nidre" means "all the vows." It is a supplication to God to annul all vows make to him during the year which have not been fulfilled, before the setting sun tells that "Yom Kippur" has begun. The orthodox Jews are particular to state that the supplication is purely of religious significance, and has no bearing whatever upon civil contracts, as the enemies of the Hebrew church have alleged. Aside from "Kal Nidre," the day's services consist only of prayers to God. After the setting of the sun the orthodox again release themselves from any impressive religious duty for fully four months.

The services on "Yom Kippur" this year will be unusually impressive, as the holiday falls on "Shabbath," or Saturday, the Jewish Sunday, which is in itself observed by some of the orthodox Jews as a solemn day.

THE BLACK—POTTER WEDDING.

At Channing Memorial Church last evening Miss Lillian Augusta Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Potter, was married to Mr. Charles Edgar Black of New York, Rev. G. W. Cutter officiating. The church was well filled with relatives and friends, and as the guests were being shown to their seats a program of music was rendered by an instrumental trio, consisting of Mrs. Eleanor Crandall, organist; Mr. F. J. McClosky, violinist, and Mr. Albert P. Crandall, 'cellist. The bridal party entered the church at the appointed hour as the familiar strains of the Lohengrin wedding march pealed forth from the organ. The ushers, Messrs. Stephen A. Potter, Harold H. Luther and Augustus H. Swan of this city and Mr. Walter Waterman of Providence, were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Cora Gosling of this city and Miss M. Lizzie Clark of Easthampton, Mass., and the maid of honor, Miss M. Alice Patt of Providence. The bride was accompanied by her father. The party at the altar was met by the clergyman, the groom and the groomsman, Mr. David Costello of New York. The ceremony was performed amid a bower of palms and potted plants, white plumed hydrangeas being the only flowers used.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a Duchess lace veil, and carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley; the maid of honor wore white muslin with pink ribbons and carried a bouquet of pinks and roses, and the bridesmaids were dressed in pink silk chiffon and carried bouquets of La France roses. The groomsman and ushers wore pearl scarf pins, gifts of the groom, and the maid of honor and bridesmaids carried lace handkerchiefs, gifts of the bride.

A reception at the residence of the bride's parents on Park street followed the ceremony, and was attended by only the relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Black left by train for Boston on a wedding journey, which will include an extended tour in the West.

The following subjects will be discussed in the miscellaneous series: "Shakespeare's Fools," "Heroes and Heroines of Fiction," "National Proverbs," "What Education Does the State Owe the Citizen," "Some Commercial Appliances of Electricity," "Popular Errors and Superstitions," and "A Bundle of Books." The anonymous essays will be on "Rhode Island Pictures, Past and Present."

Dandruff is an exudation from the pores of the skin that spreads and dries, forming scurf and causing the hair to fall out. Hall's Hair Renewer cures it.

IF YOU WERE HERE.

If you were here, the changing sea—
Now gold or green, now purple coy,
Now winsome blue at smiling noon,
And fading pale at eve too soon—
Would prove a fairy palace, where
My thoughts a million gems would wear
To celebrate their joy.

If you were here, the wilful road,
Meandering now hard by the sea,
Avoiding, claiming, risking sheer,
Now hiding in a woodland dreer,
Would be a magic lane, whose end
Would golden gifts and rubies lend
To lure us constantly.

The prickly wooded island there,
That stretches long and dark and still—
The white sand girding all the land,
Twilight the steps of pirate band—
Would be a mystic shore, where we
Would search the key of things to be,
And find it at our will.

If you were here, the crescent moon,
Queen regnant of the fitful tide,
Who gilds the crest of every wave,
Proclaiming it her loving slave,
Would lift the sea from brim to brim,
Forgetful of her ebbing whim;
And here our bark would ride.

And all the shells along the strand
Would empty out their sea song lore
Upon the dying evening gale;
And both should push our silken sail
Far off to a sweet-scented land,
Where we would wander, hand in hand,
Nor part for evermore.

—[Sarah Stirling McEnery, in Harper's Bazar.

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND AND PROVIDENCE PLANTATIONS.

NEWPORT, SC. CITY OF NEWPORT.

WHEREAS, Chapter 1430 of the Public Laws passed by the General Assembly May 20, 1895, declares approved and requires to be submitted to the electors on the 25th day of September 1895, the following proposition of amendment to the Constitution of the State, viz:

"ARTICLE XI.

"SECTION 1. The senate shall consist of one senator from each town or city in the State. The lieutenant-governor shall preside in the senate and in grand committee. The presiding officer of the senate and grand committee shall have a right to vote in case of equal division, but not otherwise.

"SEC. 2. If by reason of death, resignation, absence, or other cause, there be no lieutenant-governor present to preside in the senate, the senate shall elect one of its own members to preside during such absence or vacancy; and until such election is made by the senate the secretary of state shall preside. The senate shall have authority to elect its secretary and such other officers as it may deem necessary.

"SEC. 3. The house of representatives shall never exceed seventy-two members, and shall be constituted on the basis of population, always allowing one representative for a fraction exceeding half the ratio; but each town or city shall always be entitled to at least one member; and no town or city shall have more than one-sixth of the whole number of members to which the house is hereby limited. The present ratio shall be one representative to every four thousand three hundred and twenty-three inhabitants, and the general assembly may, after any new census taken by the authority of the United States or of this State, re-apportion the representation by altering the ratio. The general assembly may by law from time to time in its discretion, when requested so to do by vote of the city council of any city, apportion the representatives to which such city is or may hereafter be entitled, among the several wards in such city, and the representatives so apportioned shall be voted for and elected only by the electors in the ward or wards to which they are apportioned: Provided, however, that each ward in any city so apportioned shall, if the number of representatives to which such city is entitled equals the number of wards, have at least one representative; but no town shall be divided into districts for the choice of representatives.

"SEC. 4. The governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, attorney general, general treasurer, senators and representatives, shall be elected biennially at the town, ward or district meetings to be held on the first Wednesday of April in each alternate year, and shall severally hold their offices for two years from the last Tuesday of May next succeeding said first Wednesday of April, and until others are legally chosen and duly qualified to fill their places. If elected or qualified after the said last Tuesday of May, they shall hold their offices for the remainder of the two years ensuing said last Tuesday of May, and until their successors are qualified to act.

"SEC. 5. Section 3 of Article VII, "Of the Executive Power," Section 3 of Article VIII, "Of Elections," and Article XIII "Of Amendments," are hereby amended by striking out the word "annual" wherever it occurs in all the above named sections and in Article XIII of the Constitution, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "biennial."

"SEC. 6. The general assembly may provide by law for the continuance in office of any officers of election or appointment until other persons are qualified to take their places.

"SEC. 7. The first election under this Article shall be held on the first Wednesday of April next following the adoption thereof, as provided by Article XIII of the Constitution of the State.

"SEC. 8. This amendment shall take in the Constitution of the State, the place of Section 1 of Article V "Of the House of Representatives," which section is hereby annulled; of Article VI "Of the Senate," which article is hereby annulled; of Section 1 of Article VIII "Of Elections," which is hereby annulled; of Section 15 of Article IV, which is hereby annulled; and also of the word "annual" wherever it occurs in the several sections, and in Article XIII, referred to in Section 5 of this Amendment."

WHEREFORE, the qualified electors of this city entitled to vote for General Officers are hereby notified to assemble in Ward Meetings on Wednesday September 25, 1895, at half past six o'clock in the morning at the following named places in their respective wards:

IN THE FIRST WARD, at the Ward Room in No. 2 Fire Station building, Bridge street;

IN THE SECOND WARD, at the Ward Room in No. 4 Fire Station building, Equality Park place;

IN THE THIRD WARD, at the Ward Room in No. 1 Fire Station building, Mill street;

IN THE FOURTH WARD, at the Ward Room in No. 7 Fire Station building, Young street;

IN THE FIFTH WARD, at No. 6 Fire Station Engine Room, Thames street.

AND to give in their ballots, as provided by law, to approve or reject the aforesaid proposition of amendment to the Constitution of the State.

Said Ward Meetings, according to law, will be kept open from half past six o'clock in the morning until half past six o'clock in the evening, and no longer.

WITNESS my hand this Seventeenth day of September A. D. 1895.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1895.

This remarkable woman, who has been before the public nearly half a century as a public speaker, and most of the time in behalf of an unpopular cause, announces that she has closed her career in that direction, having already delivered her last public address. Having helped make history through one of its most interesting and exciting periods, she now proposes to turn her hand to writing history, in so far at least as her own work is involved. And she will surely find material enough on hand to occupy her remaining days as strength and opportunity may allow.

Miss Anthony has shown herself a woman of noble and high purpose, and has lived to see many of the reforms which she advocated far advanced in the line of success. She was an ardent abolitionist, and wrote and spoke for the black man in chains, when to do so involved more courage than most people possess. But her more special theme was the advancement of woman in her rights before the law, and there is not a state in the Union which has not adopted many of the ideas which, when first advanced by her, were regarded as the vaporings of a visionary.

It may be said to her credit that Susan B. Anthony was never moved to turn aside through the ridicule heaped upon her. For years she was the butt of newspaper jokes and jibes, but she heeded them not. And now, at seventy years of age, she can survey the work of her life with satisfaction, for, although not all the reforms to which she consecrated the energies of a well-trained mind have been secured, there has come to crown her declining years with victory the knowledge of enlarged industrial and political possibilities for woman that transcends the dreams of her most enthusiastic admirers. At no stage of her history was she a mere agitator. She came from fine old Quaker stock, was educated by skillful teachers, and her subsequent career as teacher in the schools of New York state gave her a well disciplined mind for the work to which she was destined to dedicate her life. An illustration of her courageous and defiant methods was afforded by her casting ballots at the state and Congressional election in Rochester in 1872, to test the application of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the United States constitution. She was arrested for illegal voting and was fined, but, in accordance with her defiant declaration, she never paid the penalty, nor was she sent to prison, to which the law condemned her.

Woman suffrage was but one of her demands. She stood for the right of married women to hold and control their own property, which was then nowhere allowed; the right of girls to be educated in our highest and best colleges, and to enter the professions if they so desired, neither of which was then tolerated, and kindred reforms which have already come. She never entered upon the dress reform crusade, though she and Mrs. Bloomer were intimate friends and often spoke from the same platform. She felt that she had a higher mission and it was one from which she never swerved.

THE FIRST MAN.

A Denver "professor," in rooting about among the plains and hills of the great West, thinks he has discovered the first man, but does not pretend to be able as yet to find out if his name was Adam. He claims that the discovery fully confirms the Darwinian theory of the origin of our race, and that the remains which he has gathered and tied up in a bag are those of the "missing link" which scientists and philosophers have been unable to supply.

But just why he has come to the conclusion expressed it is difficult to see. How does he know that this "white-faced capuchin monkey" was not the "first man's" uncle or cousin? And in what respect does this dried-up ape differ from thousands of others, except that it has a white face? And as he has only skeleton bones in his bag, by what process of reasoning does he come to the conclusion that it was white rather than black, or blue, or brindle? These are questions which an anxious world is waiting to have answered before taking in the length, breadth and superficial contents of the story.

The "professor" thinks he has made a great "find" in thus practically locating the cradle of the human race. To be sure, the drop from the Garden of Eden to Denver is very marked, and the difficulties of the situation are so many and so great that we must incline to the hypothesis of several independent points from which humanity has proceeded in its onward flow to the present time. And so we will not dispute the claim of the "professor" that many of the Denver people, especially the Denver board of aldermen, are lineal descendants of the white-faced monkey now for the first time caught and bagged.

The people of Maine are justly proud to have one of the battleships named after their state. This is right and proper, and the New York Evening Telegram is led to say: "Welcome to the battleship Maine, the largest and most powerful vessel in the United States navy, which has just gone into commission. There is no room for jealousy in patriotic rivalry between these national defenders as namesakes of the several states. Besides, Maine, which under the old time free trade and five ships regime led all the states in the shipbuilding industry, deserves the distinction of so creditable a naval prestige."

Rev. Dr. Talmage is likely to go to Washington as co-pastor of Rev. Dr. Sunderland, who has for many years served as minister in charge of the First Presbyterian Church, of which President Cleveland and Mrs. Cleveland are members. Dr. Sunderland is no longer able to do the full work of the pastorate and the congregation is not willing to part with him, and so this combination is proposed. It may work well, but it is most likely to result otherwise. Both Dr. Sunderland and Dr. Talmage are somewhat eccentric, and their eccentricities do not always run the same way.

The Brockton Enterprise says: "Judge Dunbar won't be popular with the law breaking brethren in Norfolk county from this time on. His sentences imposed Monday on liquor dealers and assailants of a police officer are the most uniformly severe we have known for a long time." We do not know Judge Dunbar, but take it for granted that, like all other good judges, he does not sentence criminals as a method of seeking popularity. But if he keeps on in this way he will be likely to have fewer criminals to sentence.

The Chinese government sets out with brave words and vigorous efforts for the protection of missionaries and other peaceable and well-behaved foreigners throughout the empire. The emperor announces his purpose to deal with all offenders with the utmost severity, and commands all inferior officers to be prompt and efficient in the discharge of their duties. This leaves the Chinese "vegetarians" and some of the American newspapers almost alone in active opposition to Christian missions.

Governor Morton is fully revenged for the inexcusable slight put upon him in 1892, when he was shelved by the Republican national convention as Vice Presidential candidate in favor of Whitelaw Reid. He has been made governor of the great state of New York, and is now nominated by his party in that state for the Presidency itself. All this is worth more than would have been the nomination for Vice President, followed by disaster and defeat.

Chickamauga's battlefield is the centre of interest for war veterans. Soldiers of the blue and gray are flocking to the scene of the bloody strife of thirty years ago, to add another bond to the many which now join the North and South, by hand shakes and good feeling on the ground where fierce and sanguinary strife waged between them. Such reunions cannot help but heal the already well united wounds.

"I tell you, machine politics is the only politics that will win," remarks Mr. Richard Croker. And it will always be so while so many people stand committed to vote the straight ticket. The machine can manage nominating conventions; but the people must exercise the veto power whenever occasion requires. There is no other safety in politics.

Mrs. Ballington Booth thinks a strong-minded husband is the best cure for the new women idea. But suppose the husband is not strong-minded, what then? Must the wife also be a weakling, in order to keep him company?

There were hearty cheers for Reed, McKinley, Morton, and above all for Platt, in the New York Republican convention, but not one for Roosevelt. Indeed, so far as appears, his name was not mentioned in the Platt mass meeting.

The Cramps are said to have lost $25,000,000 worth of contracts to build warships for the Japanese because they could not "equip" the ships with guns. And now the poor fellows want the government to help them out.

Some sections of Michigan were swept by a hurricane yesterday, and much damage was the result. The storm on the lakes was very severe, and shipping disasters will doubtless be reported in due time.

An exchange says: "There is one particularly cheerful phase to the Atlanta exposition; it does not boast of any 'lady managers,' but is content with the good old unpretentious name of 'women.'"

It is proposed that Harrison, McKinley, Morton, Reed, Platt and Quay form a trust. But the thing in the way is that they do not trust each other, not even a little bit.

Yesterday was Mayors' day at the Rhode Island state fair. The officials are understood to have made a very fair exhibit.

Now that Thomas B. Reed has worked off his superfluous flesh and is reduced to fighting trim, the battle will begin.

AT THE DINNER TABLE.

Talking is one of the best of all recreations, and the woman who understands the art possesses a most useful and enjoyable accomplishment. No dinner table is well appointed without good talkers, and the basis of interesting conversation is reality.

After a course of London dinners, Sir Walter Scott said, "The bishops and lawyers talked better than the wits." That is, the wits talked for the sake of talking, and the church and the law had something to talk about. Yet specialties and hobbies are not admissible at the dinner table, and a woman who can only talk of her own failings is no business in society. She ought to write a pamphlet or go to the lecture platform, for any conversation at the dinner table that is a strain on the attention or patience soon becomes a bore; indeed, one of the chief elements of pleasant company is a readiness to talk, or to be talked to, on any rational subject.

The most charming talkers let a bright listener see their thoughts in formation, for talk that has been prepared has a ready made flatness. It is the aerated thought of the moment that has the sparkle, and a good talker finds the word by instinct, as a clever horse on a bad road always puts his foot in the right place. This fact makes the good talker also a good listener, because her best conversation will follow brightly and instantly the lead that others give it, and prevents, likewise, the worst of all conversational faults—monopoly.

Dean Swift thought "no one ought to talk at a dinner table longer than a minute at a time," and his rules for such conversation are so admirable that they might be printed on our dinner menus:

> Conversation is but carving;
> Give no more to every guest
> Than he's able to digest.
> Give him always of the prime,
> And but little at a time.
> Carve to all but just enough,
> Let them neither starve nor stuff,
> And that you may have your due,
> Let your neighbor carve for you.

However, we must make some allowance for our dilier hatchets. If we all had Dean Swift's genius we might all make minute speeches.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE WAR TELEPHONE.

An interesting experiment of installing a telephone by trotting cavalry was recently successfully undertaken by some Prussian Uhlans between Berlin and Potsdam. Two sets, of one officer and two non-commissioned officers, proceeded in the early morning respectively from Berlin and Potsdam. Each set was equipped with a complete telephone apparatus, which one of the men carried in a leather case on his chest, besides the requisite quantity of thin wire. The end of the wire was connected with the respective towns' telephone station and the wire was, by means of a fork fixed at the end of the lance, thrown over the tops of the trees along the road. As each kilometer of wire was thus suspended a halt was made, and it was ascertained whether there was connection with the station. A new kilometer of wire was then connected with the former, and on went the men. The two sets met at Teltow. The wires, having been respectively tested with their respective stations, were connected, and telephonic connection between Berlin and Potsdam was established. The distance is about twenty miles, and the whole thing was done in about four hours.

HOW BUTTER DISHES AND CLOTHES PINS ARE MADE.

The oval, scooped-out disks of wood which have become so familiar at the grocery for doing up butter, lard and other commodities, and at the Sunday school picnic as a receptacle for pie and pickles, are manufactured in Traverse City, Mich., and the factory turning them out is the largest in the world; in fact, says the Chicago Record, it is said to be the only one except a factory in St. Louis, which operates under the patents owned by the Michigan company. The company buys the standing timber on a tract of land and works up everything on it, whether elm, ash, maple, birch or hemlock. The factory consumes about twelve million feet of lumber annually.

The logs as they are cut in the forest are floated down the Boardman river to the mill booms, and as they are wanted are hoisted into the saw-mill, where they are cut. For the butter dishes maple is the only wood used. The outer slabs of the maple logs are slashed off and cut to dimensions of firewood. Then a few layers are sliced off for lumber. After the slabs and lumber are cut a piece of lumber about six inches in thickness and eight inches wide is left the length of the log, and this is the part reserved for the butter dishes.

The heavy timber is cut into blocks ten or twelve inches in length and boiled in huge vats until thoroughly softened. The hot blocks are placed in machines which scoop out the butter dishes at the rate of two hundred a minute. A curved knife revolving on a spindle does the work, the block being automatically advanced with each revolution of the spindle, and a knife working up and down taking off a slice just the thickness of the plate, so as to leave the surface the same as before. The dishes are scooped out of the solid wood exactly as they are found at the grocery, and all that is done to them after they leave the machine is to dry and pack them.

As the dishes fall from the machine they drop into a funnel which carries them to the dry kilns. Through the drying process they pass automatically and finally fall upon a long table, where a row of girls sort them and prepare them for packing. It takes about twenty minutes for the plates to go through the drying process, and not a hand touches them until the girls sort them for packing. Ten machines are working constantly on the oval butter dishes, and the capacity of the works is approximately six hundred thousand a day.

The most wonderful machine in the shop is that which manufactures the wire end dishes. For these the logs are cut into bolts, boiled, and then converted into veneers the thickness of the materials used in the plates. Still hot and steaming the veneers are fed through a machine which cuts the veneer to the required shape and size, marks the folds, folds them, and sews the ends of the dish with wire and finally delivers the dish complete at the other end. These machines turn out the wire-end dishes at the rate of one hundred a minute, and the factory facilities are for two hundred thousand a day when running at full capacity.

In making clothes pins, cull lumber which cannot be used for dishes and is not suitable for high-grade lumber is used. The lumber, as it comes from the saw, is cut into lengths. These blocks of wood are carried to a receptacle above and rapidly fed down upon a table where a nimble-fingered girl arranges them sidewise upon a revolving metal belt. The belt carries them to the turning machine, where the blocks are cut into the shape of clothes pins without the forks. As the turned blocks drop down, another girl arranges them upon another belt which carries them to the saw which forks the pins and gives them the inner bevel on the ends. From this machine the pins drop into a carrier which takes them to the big revolving cylinders where they are dried and polished, the cylinders receiving and delivering the pins automatically.

The wooden washboards are made of thin maple boards, which can be used neither for dishes, clothes pins nor lumber. The boards are given the "crimp" so familiar in wash boards by a machine which works all but automatically, and the side pieces and headboard are dovetailed in the same way. One man puts the boards together, aided by a machine, and he turns out about forty dozen washboards daily. The wooden boards are sold almost entirely in the South.—[Boston Journal of Commerce.

During the last two weeks the crops have greatly improved. It is estimated that the corn crop on an area of 82,000,000 acres will be, in round numbers, from 2,287,000,000 to 2,328,000,000 bushels. The oat crop is estimated at 734,000,000 bushels, which is above the annual average. The cotton crop is disappointing. It may pick up somewhat before frost comes, but the wheat harvest will be very light. The corn crop is estimated at 607,000,000 bushels above the average. Taken as a whole, the harvest of 1895 will not be inferior to that of 1894.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19, 8 A. M.—For Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—Cloudy and threatening, followed by fair weather; northeasterly winds, becoming variable; warmer in the interior Friday evening.

FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY.

BOSTON, Sept. 19, 8 A. M.—Local forecast for Boston and vicinity until Friday night—Fair; warmer Friday; variable winds, becoming southerly.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS.

According to the mornings reports from the observing stations, the weather throughout the country is fair, although some cloudiness from yesterday's disturbance remains in the East. Elsewhere the skies for the most part are clear. The barometer is decidedly low in the West and Northwest, with minimum pressure about 29.30 inches in eastern Montana. This depression, as it advances eastward, will probably increase later in the week, but as yet it has had little effect upon the weather. The temperature ranges above summer figures in the Central states and eastward to the middle Atlantic coast. The cool wave continues over the New England states.

HARVARD AND YALE MAY MEET.

Probability That a Football Match May be Arranged.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The Journal says: For some time past it has been known that negotiations have been pending to bring about a football game between the Harvard and Yale elevens. Mr. Al. Cowles of Yale was unsuccessful in his efforts a month ago, but now it is stated on the best authority that representatives of both colleges have met, and that in all probability a game will be played. An official announcement will be made in a day or two. If this is so, Yale must have made the first advances, as it was known that Professor Ames and all the Harvard advisers were determined that Harvard should not recede from her position and that all overtures must come from Yale.

SPANISH SITUATION GLOOMY.

Cuban Insurgents Committing Depredations Throughout the Island.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 19.—Passengers on the Mascotte, from Havana, last night, said that matters looked very gloomy for the Spaniards in Cuba. The insurgents are committing great depredations all over the country, and the Spanish troops fear to meet them, as they are invariably driven back to the towns. Roloff, with a heavy force, is operating around Placetas, and the whole country is in sympathy with him. Up to the departure of the Mascotte yesterday, over seventy arrests had been made of Cuban sympathizers. The authorities are searching every house, looking for contraband goods. The fireman, Lopez, who was taken from the Mascotte on her last trip for landing a box of cartridges, has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. The boatmen suffered the same fate.

GAMBLED AND SPECULATED.

Chicago Receiving Teller and $50,000 Missing.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Ross C. Van Bokelen, receiving teller of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, is missing, with about $50,000 of the money belonging to the institution. Van Bokelen is supposed to be in Mexico. The shortage was discovered last Monday night, when an examination of the books was begun. Most of the stealings were in small sums, last Saturday's being the largest, when it is supposed that he took $15,000. When he came down to the bank Saturday morning he complained of feeling ill, and asked for his annual vacation, which was granted him. The loss is an insignificant one to the bank, which has a paid capital of $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 surplus. Van Bokelen played heavily at cards, was a plunger at the races, and also speculated in stocks and grain.

CABLED ACROSS.

Lord Dunraven's Denial of the Receipt of Mr Iselin's Last Offer.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The correspondent of the Central News at Cowes wires that Lord Dunraven this morning cabled to the Royal Yacht Squadron that he would like it to be clearly understood that the offer contained in Mr. Iselin's letter of September 16, to re-sail either the last two races or the whole series, had never been made to him, either by Mr. Iselin or by the regatta committee of the New York Yacht Club.

New Haven Road Branches to be Equipped with Electricity.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Vice President J. R. Kendrick of the New Haven road says: As soon as the four-tracking of the Old Colony road is completed to Brockton, which will take about a year, the suburban branches of the company will be electrically equipped, including the Shawmut branch. As to the rumors that the fares will be reduced on these branches, that is something for the directors to determine in the future.

Assignment of a Bridgeport Real Estate Dealer.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 19.—William H. Nichols, a real estate dealer who owns about forty dwellings in this city and Black Rock, made an assignment this morning. He says rents are coming in slowly, and his creditors forced him to take the step.

Yard Master's Legs Crushed at Attleboro.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 19.—Joseph Dickins, yard master, was run over this forenoon by the Walpole freight and both his legs were badly crushed. He was carried to a hospital in Providence, and probably both legs will be amputated.

Munitions of War for the Cuban Insurgents Found in the Bahamas.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 19.—According to the Independence Belge, the agent in the Bahamas of a Belgian firm has telegraphed to his principals that an immense quantity of rifles, ammunition and other military stores, intended for the Cuban insurgents, has been found on the British island of Abaco. The stores, the agent says, were secretly shipped from New York.

Swift Justice in a Connecticut Court.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 19.—Swift justice was meted out to James Martin in the superior court today. He was arrested Tuesday for the burglary of $100 worth of jewelry, clothing, etc., from Mary J. Wilbur, was bound over yesterday, tried today, found guilty, and sentenced to three years in state prison. He was released from jail September 10, where he had served a year for theft.

FIRE LOSSES.

Factories, Lumber Yards and Residences Burned at Oshkosh.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Sept. 19.—Yesterday afternoon fire broke out in the big sash, door and blind factory of the Morgan company at Sixth and Oregon streets. This plant was destroyed, and the flames leaped across Oregon and Sixth streets, enveloping the sleigh and wagon plant of Gab Stretch, a saloon building and residences on Sixth street. By hard work the fire was hemmed in in the residence portion of Sixth street, after destroying three houses. The fire then took another turn, and ate its way to the large lumber piles of the Conlee Lumber Company, located along the river front, where eight million feet of lumber were destroyed. The fire department concentrated its efforts at this point, and about 5 o'clock had the flames under control. John Zellmer, foreman of the Morgan Company factory, was burned to death while attempting to secure tools from the burning factory. During the fire among the lumber piles of the Conlee Lumber Company one of them fell, burying three men beneath it. They were released, but one of them was severely burned. The Morgan Company's loss is $175,000; Stretch wagon plant, $75,000; Conlee Lumber Company, on lumber, $100,000; residences, $25,000. The insurance on the Morgan plant was light, while the rest of the destroyed property was well covered.

MORE THAN THIRTY DROWNED.

Government Cruiser Wrecked in a Collision Off the Coast of Cuba.

HAVANA, Sept. 19.—Cruiser Barcastegule was wrecked at midnight last night by coming in collision with merchant steamer Mortera in the canal at the entrance of Port Barcastegule. Marine General Delgado Parejo and three other officers and thirty of the crew were drowned. Parejo's body has been recovered. Captain Ybanese's body was also recovered, but in a badly mutilated condition, indicating that he had been crushed in the collision. The cruiser had been employed on government business between different ports of the island of Cuba.

Found Dead Beside a Railroad Track.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Sept. 19.—James Grover, aged about forty-five years, was found dead beside the Fitchburg railroad tracks just east of Freedom crossing about 11 o'clock last night. The man had probably been struck by the early train. Grover was employed on the new electric railroad to Williamstown, and was probably walking on the track.

Preparing for the Trial of the Katahdin.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 19.—United States steamers Dolphin and A. D. Roche arrived here last night, having been detailed to look over the course and arrange the buoys and marks for the trial of ram Katahdin, which will take place off here about October 1.

THE MUCH POSTPONED BASE BALL GAME.

The announcement that the base ball season is to be brought to an unexpected close this week does not cause so much sorrow as the additional statement, that the summer resident-picked nine game may not take place. It will not be played Saturday, but the respective captains, Messrs. Peters and Richards, hope to arrange it for next week. They know it may be cold then, but they are confident that they have such a good thing that the public, whether it knows about base ball or not, will miss it if the game does not take place. The pitcher for the summer residents has been practicing assiduously, and will have Joe Schneider as a backstop, but the picked team players have knocked so many two-baggers off their own twirler's curves that they say nothing can prevent their batting record from being as good as Sexton's when he led the league this season.

SPORTS AT WESTCHESTER.

The Country Club of Westchester is having a series of sports at its clubhouse at Westchester, where a large number of the summer residents of Newport are assembled. In yesterday's lawn tennis matches Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, Jr., Mr. C. F. Havemeyer, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mr. C. Creighton Webb and Mrs. E. C. Potter participated. In today's gymkhana races Lawrence Waterbury, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., J. A. Stillman, Reginald Brooks, I. Townsend Burden, Jr., E. C. Potter, Craig Wadsworth, Moses Taylor and E. Stevens are entered in the cane and umbrella race; Mrs. E. C. Potter and Miss Waterbury in the ladies' race; R. Brooks, I. Townsend Burden, Jr., J. M. Waterbury, Jr., L. Waterbury, Ernest Iselin, E. Stevens, M. Taylor and C. B. Mitchell in the potato race, and J. A. Stillman, E. C. Potter, Craig Wadsworth, L. Waterbury, R. Brooks, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., Marion Story, C. F. Havemeyer, C. B. Mitchell, E. Stevens and M. Taylor in the saddle races.

The feature of the day yesterday was Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt's dinner and dance on board his yacht Valiant, to which the families who live in the Country Club grounds and in the neighborhood were invited. Among his guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Havemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Waterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Elliot, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Dillon Ripley, Stanley Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Story, Colonel and Mrs. De Lancey Kane, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Duncan, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Potter, F. O. Beach, W. S. Hoyt, J. Louis Webb, G. Creighton Webb, R. Livingston Beekman, Miss Maud Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Alfonso de Navarro and N. C. Reynal. A cotillon followed the dinner.

THE NEW TORPEDO BOATS.

Chief Naval Constructor Hichborn and Chief Engineer Melville, who have had under joint consideration the bids for the three torpedo boats authorized by the last Congress, have completed their report, and it is understood have recommended that the bids of the Herreshoffs be accepted, provided it can be done under the law, which provided for building one boat on the Pacific coast, one on the Mississippi and one on the Gulf coast. The only Western bids were from the Pacific coast, and these exceeded the limit of cost fixed by Congress. Nothing official will be given out concerning their conclusions until the Secretary of the Navy passes upon the question, but the understanding about the department is that the two bureau chiefs agree in recommending the acceptance of the bid of the Herreshoffs, which was the lowest made, with some conditions attached, and providing the contract can be let to this firm without violation of law.

There are several legal questions involved in the matter, which have not yet been taken up. The law provides for the building of one of the three torpedo boats on the Pacific coast, one on the Mississippi river and one on the Gulf coast, providing certain conditions are complied with, and that in case these conditions are not accepted by the bidders the department can have the boats built elsewhere. No bids were received from either the Gulf or the Mississippi river section, while three were made from the Pacific coast, and one, that of the Herreshoffs, from the Atlantic coast. Of these four bids, that of the Herreshoffs was the only one which, with the armament added, would come within the limit of cost fixed by law.

In view of these conditions, it would be clearly competent to give the contract to the Herreshoffs for all the boats, if plans should prove acceptable, but for the doubt that is felt as to the propriety of having the vessels built on the Atlantic coast without giving other Eastern shipbuilders further opportunity to bid.

Another legal point involved is as to whether it is contemplated by the law that the cost of each boat shall be limited to $175,000, or whether some of the boats can be constructed at a greater price and some at a lesser, providing all the vessels are built within the aggregate appropriation.—(Washington Star.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

At the Gardner House—W. B. Gladding, Providence.

Mr. Russell Bryer, who has managed the telegraph and telephone business here this season, has accepted a position at the Torpedo Station and entered upon his duties today.

Mr. C. H. Neldringhaus and family of St. Louis and the family of Dr. Wadsworth of Boston have returned to their winter homes.

The house in process of erection for Mr. J. J. Watson on Greene lane, and also the house for Mr. Carton of St. Louis, on the shore, have been raised and are being boarded.

Captain Wood arrived here today from Philadelphia, for the purpose of taking catboat Bebe to Atlantic City, for her owner, Dr. Reichert.

Mr. Rosengarten's sloop yacht Acme sailed yesterday for Philadelphia. Mr. Rosengarten and family will remain at their cottage for several days yet.

It is understood that the purchasers of the Greene farm will soon commence extensive improvements upon the property. The report that a new hotel is part of their plans is denied by the owners.

Mr. C. F. Frusch will close his store here about October 1.

Mr. David Gordon will close his news depot after Sunday morning next.

Deputy Tax Collector W. F. Caswell reports the receipts of taxes up to date as about twenty per cent. in excess of the same time last year. Tomorrow being the last day upon which a discount is allowed, it is expected that the receipts will be large. At the present time two thirds of the total tax has been paid.

Some four or five days since the workmen who were drilling and blasting Spindle rock left with their float and machinery. At the same time a wooden buoy was placed about a thousand feet directly east of the rock, but upon the rock itself there is no buoy or spindle. As a consequence there is considerable speculation among boatmen as to why this buoy has been placed where it is, and also as to why Spindle rock has been left without a buoy, as it is a very dangerous rock to navigation, especially so when there is nothing to mark its position. Dr. David Kindleberger and family closed their cottage today and returned to their home in Philadelphia.

NAVAL NOTES.

Cruiser Marion was put in commission at the Mare Island navy yard yesterday and assigned to the Pacific station. She takes the place of the Mohican, which was put out of commission.

The old wooden frigate Lancaster, which has just been transformed into a practice gunnery ship, is destined shortly to make a long cruise. It has been necessary to relieve one hundred and sixty seamen attached to the vessels on the South Atlantic station. Their terms have about expired, and the government is obliged to bring them home. In order to do this with the least possible expense, it is proposed to send the Lancaster to Rio de Janeiro. She will take down all the men necessary to recruit the three vessels on that station, and will bring back to New York all those who have been relieved. In making this long voyage the crew of the Lancaster will undergo instruction in gunnery, so that there will be no interruption in their regular course. The crew of the Lancaster is recruited from the more advanced classes of apprentices on training ships Essex and Alliance, as well as from seamen and landsmen in the navy showing special aptitude in gunnery. They receive final instruction on the Lancaster, and are then ready for active service on the warships. In this way the Lancaster acts in the nature of a stepping stone from the training ships to the cruisers of war.

The Navy Department has forwarded to Rear Admiral Kirkland, commanding the European station, a clipping from the New York Herald, in which he is reported as saying that he considered the American missionaries in Turkey altogether a bad lot, who defied the local laws of the country in which they were temporarily residing, and then made appeals for protection which were of no necessity whatever. Pending an explanation from Admiral Kirkland, the authorities decline to say what action will be taken in case he should admit that he was quoted correctly. It is generally believed that the admiral will either refuse to explain or will deny that he made any such statements, and a court-martial is probable. Whatever the result may be, Admiral Kirkland will come home in November, his two years' tour of duty at sea expiring during that month. The old report that Rear Admiral Ramsay, chief of the bureau of navigation, will succeed him has been revived, but there is hardly any doubt that Secretary Herbert will decline to permit this officer to be detailed away from his present duty. Commodore T. O. Selfridge, it is well known, would like to obtain this billet. The belief prevails at the department, however, that the Secretary will shift Acting Rear Admiral C. S. Norton from the South Atlantic to the European station. In this event the command of the South Atlantic station would lie between Commodores Selfridge, Phythian and Howell.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

The present month is likely to prove notable for its displays of fraternal sentiment among the survivors of the two great armies that thirty-odd years ago were in deadly conflict. The meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic at Louisville offered the first of these displays, and the voting down there of a resolution of protest against the dedication of the Confederate monument in Chicago on Decoration day was most significant. Indeed, the whole encampment at Louisville showed a remarkable spirit. Never before had the Grand Army gone so far South for its place of annual gathering, and, although it is true, as has been pointed out, that it had a membership of between 4,000 and 5,000 in Kentucky, and that state furnished more than 75,000 men to the Union ranks, yet the welcome given to the organization even by those who had been Confederate soldiers was very noteworthy.

This week we have another mingling of those who were once foes and now are friends. It almost marks an era in our national legislation to find the act of Congress which appropriates $20,000 for the dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga military park expressly authorizing the Secretary of War "to invite the governors of states and their staffs and the survivors of the several armies there engaged," thus including Union and Confederate survivors alike. And we may add that the commission for establishing the park contained General A. P. Stewart, to represent the Confederate army; that the lines are made as carefully for one army as for the other, and that the historical tablets record the achievements and other particulars of both, so far as the specimens before us show, with impartial fullness and fairness.

Following these ceremonies we find arranged for the Atlanta exposition a "Gray and Blue day," which seems to be specially designed to get together there as many as possible of the Grand Army visitors to Louisville and of the visitors of both armies to Chattanooga. When the intense bitterness of the war waged through four years is recalled there is something very striking in the joint visits of the whilom combatants to the scenes of their battles, and in the other evidences that antagonism has passed away. But only with such a spirit was the return of peace, prosperity, fraternity and loyalty possible.—[New York Times.

Hon. Timothy D. Sullivan, who is one of the popular politicians of New York city, never tastes a drop of liquor or smokes tobacco. And yet, at his picnic there the other day, there were consumed 150 barrels of beer, 100 cases of champagne, two barrels of whiskey, 5,000 cigars and a few glasses of sarsaparilla. The Honorable Tim appears to be a statesman of the type of Senator Hill, who never drinks or smokes himself, but is entirely willing to give other people a chance.—[Boston Herald.

The eleventh congress of Americanists will be held in the City of Mexico October 15 to 20. The subjects to be discussed will refer to the history, geography, ethnography, archeology and paleography of early America. This congress will be held under the special patronage of the Mexican government, and unusual facilities will be accorded to the members to visit under the most favorable auspices the ancient ruins and other objects of archeological interest near Mexico.

Fifteen Bodies of Native Sealers Taken from a Victoria Schooner.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Sept. 19.—Private advices from Kobediak, per steamer Topeka, add to the loss of life in the wreck of Victoria sealing schooner Walter A. Earle, which turned the Turtle near Icy cape in the same storm which wrecked schooner G. W. White. After being towed in to Wood's Island, eleven bodies of native sealers were found, and the task of taking them from the hold was nearly completed when four more bodies were brought to the surface. Out of the entire fifteen, comprising half the crew known to be aboard, but one could be identified, John White, who was identified by tattooing on the arm. No trace has ever been found of the other remaining fifteen of the crew, most of whom were white.

Ambassadors Eustis and Runyon Will Not Exchange Places.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The correspondent of the United Press in Paris telegraphs that there is no ground for the report which appeared in the Journal of that city, that Mr. Eustis, United States ambassador at Paris, and Mr. Runyon, United States ambassador at Berlin, are soon to change places. The correspondent called at the United States embassy in Paris to inquire into the matter, and was informed that the rumor was utterly without foundation. The report was pronounced absurd and excited laughter among the officials at the embassy.

Italy's National Rifle Contest Opened.

ROME, Sept. 19.—The King and Queen of Italy attended the inauguration of the national rifle contest yesterday. There was an enormous crowd present, and a most enthusiastic greeting was given to their majesties. Prime Minister Crispi made a speech, in which he said that every Italian ought to be trained in the use of arms, in order to prevent others from misemploying arms against Italy and King Humbert. The Prince of Naples, crown prince of Italy, opened the rifle contest by firing the first shot. The contest excited keen interest and much enthusiasm was displayed by the spectators.

Desperate Kentucky Moonshiners Mortally Wounded.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 19.—John and James Howard, desperate moonshiners of Knott county, had a fight with revenue officers early yesterday morning. The Howard brothers were mortally wounded and Deputy Marshal Ingram was badly shot. The Howards had defied the revenue men for years, and a few weeks ago tried to kill Revenue Agent Collyer and his posse.

Michigan Iron Miners' Strike Virtually Ended.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Sept. 19.—The strike of the Marquette Range iron miners is virtually ended. This is the result of action taken by former employes at a branch of the Lake Superior mine, who have broken away from the union on the company's terms. Hundreds of others are ready to take the same step when some one takes the lead.

CAPTAIN CRANFIELD'S LAMENT.

Captain Cranfield of the Valkyrie tells the reporters that he is glad to return to England. "I have had enough of racing over here," he declared. "And I never want to come over here again." "Do you mean that you never will return?" "No; I don't mean that, of course. I can't tell what might happen, you know. But there will be no more international racing over here. There's no fair play to be had. Why, I never saw anything like the way we were treated in last Tuesday's race. There were half a dozen tugs racing right alongside our bows at the time. And that committee tug, the Luckenbach, was the worst of all of them. Then on Thursday, too, look what they did when we were up off Bayridge? We were all at supper, leaving the watch of three men on the ship. Your boats came alongside, and the three poor fellows were hissed and hooted at. Why, they had no more to do with the thing than you had. What sort of fair play is that?"

The reporters suggested that neither the New York Yacht Club nor the general public could well be held responsible for the bad manners of a few disappointed excursionists. "Oh, well, there were more than a few of them. They are the ones who make the trouble. They go down to Sandy Hook to see the show and have a good time. Their skipper may be a decent fellow, but some other boat gets in his way and his passengers grumble, and he edges up closer, and so it goes until there's no room at all to race. There'll be no more races off Sandy Hook, I'm thinking, unless they find a different way to sail them. If the committee could keep their steamer and the two boats lying off the Hook until a good day came, and then without notice, so as to have no steamers about, say, 'Now gentlemen, if you are ready we will tow you out twenty-five or thirty miles and have a race,' why then it might be possible to sail a clear course."

"Do you think Newport would be a better place to sail the races?" "No, Newport would be no better. No place in America would be any better. The only way is to take them out of the country and sail in neutral waters. Bermuda would be a good place, or in the Mediterranean. Another thing surprising is to have men who are interested in charge of the races. I don't think that either an American or an Englishman should conduct the races." "What nationality would you recommend, French or German?" Either one. They would be fair enough." "Do you think there is any chance of a challenge for the America's cup from Mr. Walker, the owner of the Ailsa?" "There is not." "There is a chance that the Defender may go over and race on the other side next season," said the reporter. "Let her come," replied Captain Cranfield. "I hope she will, and she will have fair play if she does. Yes, sir. And there will be no interference with her, either. There is none of that over there. We do those things differently. Why, there may not be a single boat come out to see a race there, even if there's an American yacht racing."

Take the Wickford line for New York and avoid the rush on the sound steamers. Leave Commercial wharf, opposite Postoffice, 7:10, 10 A. M.; 1:20, 4:35, 7:40, 11:15 P. M.

WAS SHE HYPNOTIZED?

A Man with a Cadaverous Face Drives a Girl from the Stage.

A Bridgeport special to the New York Herald says that Miss Beatrice Moreland, a member of Palmer Cox's "Brownie" company, now playing at the Park City Theatre, in that city, has disappeared. Manager Barry says that he is convinced she has run away to escape the hypnotic influence of a man who was in the habit of sitting in the front row and literally transfixing her with his gaze.

Nobody knows the man's name. There is nothing striking about his appearance, except that his face is thin and cadaverous. He began to attend the performances of the company when it was playing last season in New York. It was noticed that he seemed to pay no attention to the play until Miss Moreland made her appearance in the Oriental ballet. Then he fixed his eyes on her and paid no heed to anybody else as long as she remained on the stage.

A member of the company one evening made some joke about the stranger's marked attention to Miss Moreland. She burst into tears. When she recovered her composure she told a strange story. She said she had hardly noticed the man at first, but one night became conscious that some one was regarding her intently. She glanced around and found her eyes fixed on those of the stranger with the thin, cadaverous face. They seemed to be riveted by some power which she could not resist. After a while she lost all consciousness of everything but those terrible eyes, which seemed to pierce her through and through. She moved mechanically, seeing nothing of the audience or her companions on the stage. Suddenly the spell was broken. When she returned to her room she fainted. Night after night, as she subsequently said, she went through the same experience. Struggle as she might, her eyes would turn to the dreaded occupant of the seat in the front row. Her friends noticed that she appeared depressed and in poor health.

During the summer vacation she saw nothing of her persecutor, and her health and good spirits returned. But when rehearsals began in Everett Hall, New York, he again appeared. Unable to get inside he waited till the company came out. He never molested Miss Moreland. He simply gazed at her intently, sometimes following her a short distance.

Miss Moreland began to dread a repetition of her previous experiences. "If that man appears at our first performance and annoys me as he has done," she said one night after rehearsal, "I shall leave the company. I cannot stand the strain."

The company gave its first performance for the season Tuesday night. The man with the thin, cadaverous face was there in his accustomed seat in the front row. With difficulty Miss Moreland was persuaded to go on when her turn came, and it was seen that while on the stage he exercised the same influence over her as formerly.

"That fellow," said Manager Barry, "has simply driven the girl away by looking at her. He has committed no offence for which the law can lay hold on him. We shall try to get Miss Moreland back, and in future keep the stranger out of the house, if that is possible, whenever we play."

A TURNABOUT SUGGESTED.

Spain is very poor and Cuba is profitable to her. Cuba can pay, and Spain hopes to make her pay in the future as she has done in the past. But, after all, there is a simple way out of all the trouble if only it can be followed out. If Spain cannot continue to pay expenses without Cuba's assistance, the most reasonable solution of that incompetency is for Cuba to annex Spain, and shift the capital from Madrid to Havana. If Cuba must support Spain, let her govern her, too. That is just and seemly, and conforms with the usages of every-day, nineteenth-century life, as well as with the tenet of Scripture which proclaims that to him who hath shall be given, and from him who hath not shall be taken away.—Life.

BUSINESS FIRST.

But what is the object of society, if it be not to accumulate wealth? The development of the mind, the refinement of the taste, the salvation of the soul? All the social and intellectual and aesthetic ends that men aim at are attained by wealth, not necessarily as an individual but certainly as a community possession. Has the human race anywhere laid aside the pursuit of wealth in order to cultivate its taste or its mind? How long would either taste or mind survive such a change? The individual may give up the pursuit of wealth in order to pursue art, but only on condition that the overwhelming majority of men keep on pursuing wealth. If the aspirations for a wider intellectual vision, for the satisfaction of the higher senses and the ennoblement of conduct, either have no effect upon the struggle for wealth, or stimulate it, why may we not disregard them, or at least relegate them to the second place, and consider the naked economic man? The removal of the cuticle destroys the beauty of a human body, but it lays bare the means of exertion and the springs of action.—[Fred. Perry Powers, in October Lippincott's.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, PROVIDENCE, September 5, 1895.

BY THE PROVISIONS of Chapter 1439 of the Public Laws, passed May 29, 1895, the following proposition of amendment to the Constitution of this State was declared approved, and ordered to be published and submitted to the electors for their approval or rejection, at meetings of the electors to be held on the twenty fifth day of September A. D. 1895:

ARTICLE XI.

"SECTION 1. The senate shall consist of one senator from each town or city in the state. The lieutenant-governor shall preside in the senate and in grand committee. The presiding officer of the senate and grand committee shall have a right to vote in case of equal division, but not otherwise.

"SEC. 2. If by reason of death, resignation, absence or other cause, there be no lieutenant-governor present to preside in the senate, the senate shall elect one of its own members to preside during such absence or vacancy; and until such election is made by the senate, the secretary of state shall preside. The senate shall have authority to elect its secretary and such other officers as it may deem necessary.

"SEC. 3. The house of representatives shall never exceed seventy two members, and shall be constituted on the basis of population, always allowing one representative for a fraction exceeding half the ratio; but each town or city shall always be entitled to at least one member; and no town or city shall have more than one-sixth of the whole number of members to which the house is hereby limited. The present ratio shall be one representative to every four thousand three hundred and twenty-three inhabitants, and the General Assembly may, after any new census taken by the authority of the United States or of this state, re-apportion the representation by altering the ratio. The general assembly may by law from time to time, in its discretion, when requested so to do by vote of the city council of any city, apportion the representatives to which such city is or may hereafter be entitled, among the several wards in such city, and the representatives so apportioned shall be voted for and elected only by the electors in the ward or wards to which they are apportioned: Provided, however, that each ward in any city so apportioned shall, if the number of representatives to which such city is entitled equals the number of wards, have at least one representative; but no town shall be divided into districts for the choice of representatives.

"SEC. 4. The governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, attorney general, general treasurer, senators and representatives, shall be elected biennially at the town, ward or district meetings to be held on the first Wednesday of April in each alternate year, and shall severally hold their offices for two years from the last Tuesday of May next succeeding said first Wednesday of April, and until others are legally chosen and duly qualified to fill their places. If elected or qualified after the said last Tuesday of May, they shall hold their offices for the remainder of the two years ensuing said last Tuesday of May, and until their successors are qualified to act.

"SEC. 5. Section 9 of Article VII, 'Of the Executive Power,' Section 8 of Article VIII, 'Of Elections,' and Article XIII, 'Of Amendments,' are hereby amended by striking out the word 'annual' wherever it occurs in all of the above named sections and in Article XIII of the Constitution, and inserting in lieu thereof the word 'biennial.'

"SEC. 6. The General Assembly may provide by law for the continuance in office of any officers of election or appointment until other persons are qualified to take their places.

"SEC. 7. The first election under this Article shall be had on the first Wednesday of April next following the adoption thereof, as provided by Article XIII of the Constitution of the State.

"SEC. 8. This amendment shall take in the Constitution of the State, the place of Section 1 of Article V, 'Of the House of Representatives,' which section is hereby annulled; of Article VI, 'Of the Senate,' which article is hereby annulled; of Section 1 of Article VIII, 'Of Elections,' which is hereby annulled, of Section 16 of Article IV, which is hereby annulled; and also of the word 'annual' wherever it occurs in the several sections, and in Article XIII, referred to in section 5 of this Amendment."

MOONSHINE!

The ridiculous statement that any other whiskey no matter what the make, equals that splendid

CARRICK CLUB WHISKEY

In any one particular, is like much of the other whiskeys themselves—

ALL MOONSHINE.

Why, the celebrated CARRICK CLUB WHISKEY is the only whiskey on this earth that is all pure liquor. It is distilled from the choicest selected grain only, and then bonded until age ripens and mellows it into that smooth, quickening, grand

CARRICK CLUB.

Once used—no other ever satisfies.

Carrick Club Whiskey is for sale everywhere, grocers, druggists, cafes, etc. Ask for it and don't be fooled.

A VIGOROUS PLATFORM.

Adopted by the Convention of Massachusetts Prohibitionists.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—The nominees for the Prohibition state ticket are as follows:

For governor—Edward Kendall of Cambridge.

Lieutenant governor—Edward S. Rogers of Lee.

Secretary of state—Willard O. Wiley of Beverly.

Treasurer and receiver general—William Parrington of Williamsburg.

Attorney general—Frank N. Furbush of Natick.

Auditor—Herman T. Regnell of Attleboro.

Mr. Kendall, nominee for governor, made a short speech of appreciation for the honor, and was followed by Mr. Rogers, nominee for lieutenant governor.

The speakers engaged for campaign work were Professor Nichols and Mr. and Mrs. Beverges.

It was decided that the state central committee should be composed of one from each senatorial committee and 15 members at large.

The committee on finance reported that pledges and subscriptions received amounted to $1000.25.

The Platform.

The committee on resolutions reported a platform which declared in favor of no compromise with either the manufacturer of or traffic in intoxicants for beverage uses; equal suffrage for both sexes; government control of all work of public necessity; prohibition of trusts; the integrity of the American school system; legal tender dollar, and postal savings banks; popular vote for president and congressmen; Import duties only as a means of securing equitable relations with other nations; public board of arbitration for adjustment of labor difficulties, and abolition of contract convict labor system; restricted immigration and extension of the time of residence necessary for naturalization; preservation and defense of the Sabbath, and faithful enforcement of the civil service laws.

Resolutions were also adopted thanking Mayor Jewett and Marshal Rand of Haverhill for their fearless enforcement of the no-license law in that city, and a resolution of sympathy and regret at the death of Rev. A. A. Miner.

Old Parties Turned Down.

Seldom has Music hall held a larger or more enthusiastic audience than last night, on the occasion of the celebration of the silver jubilee of the Prohibition party in this state. Neal Dow, the venerable father of the movement, was to have been tendered a reception, but owing to some miscalculation on the part of the committee they failed to meet him, and the venerable gentleman returned to Portland, Me., without visiting the hall.

John Willis Baer, chairman of the meeting, delivered a vigorous speech, denouncing the saloon and urging every one to fight the liquor traffic.

After a brief address by Major Brewer of the Salvation Army, in which he claimed that most of the hard work the members of the army had to perform was to comfort and help those whose distress was caused in the first place by rum, John G. Woolley of Chicago was introduced. He was given an ovation lasting several minutes.

In opening, the speaker gave as reasons why he was a Prohibitionist his belief that the Democratic party was incapable of administering the government, and bred to a statesmanship too provincial to deal with this unbounded and unlocalizable agency of evil, and by the declarations of its national platform self-appointed defender in ordinary of the national saloon.

"I believe," he continued, "the Republican party to be the brainiest thing in modern politics, best trained to govern, and in its rank and file sentimentally an enemy of the saloon, but swamped past remedy in bossism. Its 'bloody shirt' idiocy in Ohio, its progressive degeneracy in Pennsylvania, its moral insolvency in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, its moral paresis in New York, its inexpressible infancy in Iowa, its concentric conspiracies of conscience crucifying candidature throughout the land, mark the regal ruler of 'the sixties,' the flabby and impudent decadent of the century's end. You have it at its best in this state. The Republican party in Massachusetts, in its relation to the national concern, is an island of hopeful ill-health in an ocean of pus.

"I think the tariff, the currency reforms, the occasional paules, trifles light as air compared to the saloon in labor, commerce, politics and law. And as to the Monroe doctrine, upheld by a government which gets a third of its revenue by the ruin of its own citizens and the degradation of the public honor, I am undecided whether to call it a howling farce or a paltry brag.

"I have to be a party Prohibitionist, or be false to my country. A man ought to be true to his party. That is why we are here, and we have come to stay. To the charge of being feeble folk and unprofilic, we must needs plead guilty, but there is good blood in our veins.

"Twenty-five years ago a white-plumed, clean-handed knightly man, coming back covered with glory from the crusade, not for the holy sepulcher of the Saviour of men, but for the holy cabin of the poorest man, himself took up the flag, and it has never touched the ground, and by the grace of God it never will.

"Break us, will you, ye dirty politicians! Well, break and be damned in the hell of honest history. The snapping roots will testify the truth even in death, and church and country in the generations that are coming on shall speak in honor of the 'whips' of God's unorganized democracy—the Prohibition party."

A Society Event.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Sept. 19.—The schooner Annie Gale, ashore on Wood End, is still fast, in spite of efforts to release her. The Gale was bound for Salem from Cumberland, N. S., lumber laden.

Gun Exploded.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Sept. 19.—William Heather, 15 years old, had a shotgun heavily charged, and when he went to fire it, the barrel was blown to pieces. Heather was fatally hurt.

Silverites Getting In Line.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The free silver forces of the United States will establish headquarters in Chicago. A committee of nine was appointed to take charge of affairs and to keep the headquarters in Chicago open.

German Bigotry.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—The anti-semite agitation has culminated in the murder of a synagogue official. In the streets last night many Jews were grossly ill-treated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—An important trust, known as the American Sulphite Fibre association, has been formed. It aims to include all makers of sulphite fibre. The next meeting will be held in a few days at Boston, at which the details of plans by which the market may be controlled will be arranged.

More Spanish Consular Officers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—An evidence of active efforts being made by the Spanish government to frustrate the departure of filibustering expeditions from the south to Cuba is afforded by the appointment of four Spanish consular officers for Florida alone. These have been recognized by the president.

To Remain in Office.

THE FATAL EIGHT.

The Newports Unable to Hold Down the Fall Rivers.

The Newports played their second game in Fall River yesterday, and again both teams gave a good exhibition of ball playing. The attendance was so small that it almost required a microscope to see it, but the teams played a fine game, nevertheless. Charley Brady again umpired, and again favored his old club all he could. Newport put up the best fielding game, while Fall River was strongest at the bat. The Fall River batters, though hitting safely in nearly every inning, did not connect consecutively with Dowd's pitching until the eighth, when six runs were scored, on two singles, three doubles, bases on balls and errors. Up to this time Dowd was in good form, but in this inning he seemed unable to control the ball as he had been doing, and the Fall Rivers were not slow to take advantage of the fact. Klobedanz proved more effective than in Monday's game, and opened the play by striking out the first three men on the batting list. There is suspicion that he had none the worst of the umpiring. In spite of the score, which looks rather one sided, the game was fast and good, and well worth a larger patronage. The score is as follows:

NOTES.

It looks as though the four-club league is about in the air. The Cuban Giants were to have played in New Bedford yesterday, but did not, and it is understood will play no more games in the series. Fall River plays here today, and New Bedford tomorrow, and Newport goes to the Whaling City Saturday. These games will probably end the extra series, as neither New Bedford nor Fall River is drawing well at home. Monday there were a thousand persons on the Fall River ground to see the Newports. They saw one of the best played games of the season, but yesterday there were only about one hundred present to see the same teams. The weather, which was wet and disagreeable in Fall River, probably was responsible for a part of this falling off, but the fact that both Fall River and New Bedford are tired of base ball is the secret of these poor gatherings.

THE COST OF THE REMOVAL OF THE WHALE.

Yesterday a representative of Morse & Co., of Boston, owners of the whale that partially disappeared in fire and smoke off Hammett's wharf several weeks ago, and later was carted to sea by order of the board of health, visited Newport and had a conference with the city solicitor, the mayor and the city treasurer, in relation to paying for the whale's removal. There was considerable talk about the ownership of the float, and the visitor acknowledged that had the owners acted on the notice from the board of health they could probably have disposed of the carcass for less than it cost the city, but as they failed to act the city did right in moving in the matter. An agreement was entered into for the payment of the costs, and a draft was sent to Boston. It is probable that the city by this time has the money to its credit, and that the float will be at once removed by the owners.

NEW SIDEWALKS.

The city has filled in the sidewalk on Dearborn street with earth, and neglected to send any one around to pick up the stones, nearly as large as paving stones, that formed part of the filling, and were not pounded down. It is a question whether the first or the last condition of this work was worse for pedestrians. Those who use the sidewalks on John street are inquiring when the filling of the walk near the Watson estate is to be finished. They appreciate what has been done, but are wondering if the supply of earth was exhausted.

The highway department tried to secure some cinders for filling in, or at least top-coating such walks, but does not appear to have succeeded.

Handy and Mrs. T. A. Spencer. His funeral will be solemnized tomorrow afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Joseph S. Peckham in this city.

THE NEW NAVAL RESERVE COMPANY.

Howland, the only commissioned officer, will call a meeting at the earliest available opportunity, at which time officers will be elected and additional enlistments secured.

The boats ordered for the company, two twenty-foot whale boats, are expected at an early date. Lieutenant Howland is endeavoring to make arrangements with the Narragansett Boat Club, whereby the boats may be temporarily kept and used at the boat club quarters on the Seekonk river. The uniforms are also expected to arrive shortly, and the company will be prepared to begin preliminary training practically as soon as organized. Adjutant General Dyer intimates that there will be a program prepared during the fall, so that the new company will be given an early opportunity to commence practical operations.

CLOTH GOWNS.

While fashionable tailors will use rough-surfaced fabrics—tweed, cheviots and boucle cloths—for the greater number of gowns, they will adhere to the smooth lady's cloth for their more elaborate dresses, as they have always done. Redfern has advices to this effect from both his European houses, with also their new models for making the gowns of the coming season.

The tailors who were slow to adopt large sleeves and very wide skirts are now loudest in their praise, and insist on commending them for winter use. Certainly their long lines are most suitable for the cloth and velvet dresses made by tailors, where draperies and flounces would not be effective. The coat-waist will be used for gowns of these heavy fabrics, though round full waists will not be abandoned by the small slight women who find them becoming. An effort will be made to do away with the godet back of these coats, commonly known as the "ripple back," and substitute flat fan-like folded pleats. The back is to be very short, falling only a few inches below the waist, and is to have but few seams, though it is closely fitted. The front may be lapped slightly to allow the use of very elegant buttons, or else it falls open straight and a belt is passed around the waist, going outside the back but slipped inside the under-arm seams, and fastening under the open front. Square long tabs are on these fronts, and they are merely edged with fur. A novelty that is very effective on fitted single-breasted waists is double revers, the lower revers cut in slender points that lap in fichu fashion.

The trimmings for cloth gowns are revers and vest of cloth of a contrasting color, bias bands of the cloth of the dress stitched on in rows or in a design, narrow bands of fur, and finally the very rich braiding in gold and other metals in which tailors excel.—[Harper's Bazar.
